Our attorneys work extensively with clients who are creating and utilizing a wide range of Internet and e-commerce technologies, or have special needs or requirements brought about by new statutory frameworks.

The firm counsels both technology innovators and implementers. We negotiate and structure e-commerce specific contracts, including agreements on web design and development, website hosting, and Internet service providers, as well as application service provider arrangements and website advertising contracts.

Our lawyers also advise clients on the wide range of laws and regulations relating to privacy, electronic signatures, encryption and security, the enforceability of electronic contracts and issues of international business law.
